NATIVES NOT IN IT.

A great deal is said in the Royalist papers about what "the natives" want, what "the natives" demand, and of the emotion with which "the natives" regard the political status of this group. In the meantime these natives themselves, by whom is implied the pure Hawaiian strain, have little or nothing to say on the subject, either in the press, on the rostrum or along the curbstone. Of the three Royalist journals, not one is edited by a pure-blooded native, two being the product of Englishmen, assisted by a half-breed, and the other is the rickety intellectual bantling of a man with a white father who, a year ago, was a pronounced Annexionist. Of the ex-Queen's Cabinet, two of its members were white men and two had Caucasian fathers, the names of the quartette having the familiar Anglo-Saxon and Scandinavian ring of Parker, Cornwell, Colburn and Peterson. Even the ex-Queen herself is not a native in the strict sense of the term. It was noticeable at every meeting which the Royalists have held that white men, or men with half or quarter claim to real Hawaiian ancestry, took the leading place. Nor does the phenomenon stop here. Even the ex-Queen's legal adviser and her late Commissioner to Washington is a pure white and he, with such relics of the Kamahameha race as Mott-Smith, and Frank Pratt, and G. Hoffnung are full of complaints because "the native" has no show. One looks in vain for a real native in any of these positions or proceedings. Always and ever where he is as conspicuous for his absence as he was from that group which, in the guise of representatives of the native party which was presumed to be in search of a Moses to deliver it, surrounded Claus Spreckels on the 10th of July and gave him an obsequious send-off.

The native is being used merely as a stalking horse to office to be turned out afterwards to graze in barren pastures. In his name acts as motley a collection of refugees, banditti, adventurers and political beach-combers as ever came together outside the Carolinas in the reconstruction period. They forever talk about the "poor native" and forever try to beat him out of his rights in their own behalf. They want to draw the salaries, hold the offices, make the money, wear the titles and appeal to the world as though they were oppressed natives themselves, yet leave the genuine Hawaiian to shift for himself.

If an accurate census could be taken of those who want annexation and are active in its behalf and those who are Royalists and are hard at work for a restored monarchy and of those who care nothing about politics and public affairs so long as they get enough to eat and wear, the Royalist party would dwindle into insignificance. We doubt if five hundred people all told would be found in its ranks, and of these not half a dozen would be aborigines of unmixed blood.

ESQUIMAULT, RUSSIA AND HAWAII.

Correspondence of the New York Sun from Esquimault, B. C. says that the San Francisco newspapers are mistaken in the view that the Columbian harbor is being fortified and turned into a naval arsenal on account of the dispute with the United States over seal killing in Behring Sea. "It is quite true," he adds, "that with fortifications at Esquimault and a powerful fleet on the spot Esquimault could probably command the Straits of Fuca and all the other waters within Cape Flattery, including Puget Sound, Admiralty Inlet, and the intricate passages of the San Juan archipelago, against any ordinary naval demonstration on the part of the United States; but it may be well to repeat that the sole object of her operations at Esquimault is to establish a striking place, as the French would call it, in case of war with Russia. It would be impossible for her to hold Vancouver Island or the mainland of British Columbia if the United States were determined to eject her from either or both, no matter how much she might spend in batteries and earthworks. A land force from the United States could cut the Canadian Pacific at fifty points between here and the Rocky Mountains, while a large American squadron could shut up England's vessels in Esquimault, knock Victoria to pieces, and block the strait even without the help of American guns on the San Juan."

The Sun correspondent says it is the official opinion at Esquimault that the United States will win the Behring Sea case. There is no thought of war in that event, though England is not bound to abide by the decision of the Paris tribunal. "I had a talk a few days ago," says the correspondent, with the captain of a British war vessel. He said that England should by hook or crook have got possession of the Aleutian Islands before their transfer to the United States. That would have given her control of the North Pacific. If she could get hold of Hawaii she would have the key of the route to Australia and the west coast of South America. He could not understand what the authorities at Washington were thinking about in leaving those islands a prey to fresh revolutions, for in the end the white inhabitants were sure to wipe out the black dynasty. Some European power, in all likelihood England, would seize them if the United States left them "lying around loose," and then Americans must realize that they had blundered. Downright annexation was not necessary, but in their own interest, he thought, the Americans should lose no time in warning Europe to keep its hands off. Hawaii was worth fifty Esquimaunts."

THE EGYPTIAN PARALLEL.

The following paragraph is taken from some sketches in Harper's Weekly on the subject of "England in Egypt." That topic has already furnished important lessons upon the Hawaiian situation. This paragraph further illustrates the incompatibility of a semi-barbarous monarchy with the demands of a progressive civilization. Ismail Pasha was a typical oriental ruler; he had the typical oriental ruler's French veneer and education, a combination which has been found to produce most serious results. When an oriental is left alone he is a barbarian, or he used to be; now, after he has been made the talk of Paris for nine days, and has been given a state dinner at Marlborough House, and a few stars for his coat, and been called "cousin," he goes home with no particular disgust for his former eccentricities of misgovernment, but with a quiver full of new desires, tastes, ambitions, and thereafter plays his role of monarch with one eye on the grand stands of Europe. He wants their good opinion, but he wants to get it in his own way—the old way. He begins to build railroads and hospitals, but he continues, after his past custom, to draw the money for such improvements from licensed gambling houses or from the sale of opium. He has a French cook, but he retains the kurbash; he puts up telephones, but he does not give up the bowstring.

THE JERUSALEM BOOM.

Since a railroad was built from Jaffa to Jerusalem, that ancient city has had a modern boom. Over 800 houses, hotels, stores and villas have been built and many of the sacred places beyond the walls have been laid off into town site additions. It is the purpose of the railroad people to extend the line into the country of the Druses, eventually bringing it to Damascus and opening up the great wheat belt of the Holy Land and its contiguous territory. As this means the creation of a business atmosphere and the lucrative development of resources which have never been fully utilized or measured, we may regard the dream of a return of the Jews to the cradle of their race as not so intangible after all. These people would never go back for sentimental reasons and a general exodus of the Israelites may not be expected at all; but at the same time the opportunity to make money in and about the Holy City must attract them by the thousand, and thus, to some extent, realize the Hebrew prophecy.

ONE of the great papers in New York, in commenting upon the visit to the United States of two members of the Bermuda legislature who are trying to get the duty on onions and potatoes reduced, advises the Islanders to move for annexation and put themselves on a plane with the most favored Americans. "Bermuda," it points out, "is the Hawaii of the Atlantic," its natural place, strategically as well as commercially, being in the great republic. A recognition of this fact is beginning to dawn on the Islanders, though not so clearly yet as it has upon the Canadians regarding their own country. As times go on, however, we may expect the Bermudians to join the continental movement, inasmuch as no people dependent upon the United States for a market can afford to remain in a position where they can be shut out from the trade of that country by hostile tariff legislation.

ROYALISTS who feel any revival of courage in the fact that American flags and Annexation badges are not so common in this city as they were four months ago should try to suppress their ardor. It is true these emblems are comparatively scarce, but the reason is not political; it is climatic and meteorological. The wind has whipped and the sun faded both the flags and buttons of Annexationists and Royalists alike, and most of the emblems have been removed from flagstaff and lapel. But American sentiment and allegiance have not been injured by the weather as any Royalist can ascertain who may give the Annexation party reason to turn out.
